The International Conference on attachment-based parenting interventions will be a hybrid event, consisting of a more restricted in-person gathering and a digital conference experience. The conference is going to be a platform for all (psychologists, psychiatrists, neuropsychiatrists, educators, mental health professionals, researchers and students).

Focus of the Conference

Working with parents to “reach” children and adolescents. A challenge that for years has accompanied the professional practices of those who work with families and with parents. The questions that matter concern efficacy, effectiveness and scaling-up of the interventions.

The Conference hosts some of the most authoritative international and national scholars to propose a day dedicated to attachment-based interventions in support of parenting.

The morning is focused on interventions with parents of pre-school children, the afternoon on interventions with parents of adolescents. The central theme, in addition to the use of attachment construct in different contexts of intervention, is the theme of "diversity" as a means for reflecting on specific populations, cultural contexts and the "peculiar" qualities of the care offer.
